Goble Studios ~ the fine art of everyday inspirations

Autumn 2011

Hello from Goble Studios!

It's the most wonderful time of year again! Thank you for inviting me to your inbox or mailbox once again as another autumn comes around, and I recap summer happenings and highlight current and upcoming events.

Exhibitions

Philadelphia Water Color Society's 111th Anniversary International Exhibition of Works on Paper

Hoop was accepted into this juried exhibit, which features works on paper such as watermedia, drawings, hand pulled prints, and pastels. The Philadelphia Water Color Club (later "Society") was founded in 1900 by artists who were dedicated to bringing attention and respect to aqueous media, which at the time was considered a less valid art form than oil painting and sculpture. Over the years they achieved their goal, and to this day the members of PWCS are distinguished artists who contribute to the making, teaching, and advancement of water media. I consider it a privilege to be part of this exhibit that has historic artistic value, and hope that you also may appreciate the amazing artwork on view at this beautiful location.

Art in the Home 2011

Please save the date of Sunday, December 4th for this annual event. Several artist friends will be displaying their artwork, including pottery, watercolors, graphite drawings, and greeting cards. Some details still need to be addressed but, as usual, admission and food is free, and art is for sale. I will post more information on <http://www.dianegoblefineart.com> and Facebook as it is available, and plan to mail out postcards closer to the date. The artwork included in the Celebration Sale that has not yet been sold will be available at this event, along with other artwork. Hope to see you there!
